1) All the three Law Associations, consulted, generally approve of the proposed rules but suggest certain modifications. Both the Law Associations of Bangalore and Mysore suggest that the period of Six months laid down in Rule 46, para 1, within which the party is required to take back any document he may have produced, may be reckoned from the date of service of notice instead of from the date of notice. The L. A. of Mysore thinks that the notice might be given in the judgment in each case or by periodical notification in the Gazette as is done in the case of documents left in Sub-registry offices. This would avoid the responsibility of seeing that the notice is served on the

This is the practice in Madras please see rule 7 on page 131 of the Rules & Orders printed. Flag Z party or his pleader.

9) Regarding cases in Summary trials, the L. A. of Mysore suggests that a brief memo of the evidence as the Judge hears in the trial may be written up, as this would be of great help in courts of appeal. Please see Rule 14 of the proposed new rules.

Flagged in the place

10) The L. A. of Shimoga suggests that the period of preservation of certain records may be extended. In Appendix I to the proposed Rules, it is suggested that 16 years may be laid down as the period of preservation of the records mentioned in (a) to (e) & 5 years in the case of records mentioned in (k) & (l). The period of 5 years in "Possession cases" is considered too short, as the cases in criminal proceedings often would be of great value when a Civil action followed.

11) In the draft rules nothing is said about the arrangement of records in the Records Room — whether the records are to be arranged according to the numbers of the cases or ~~according to~~ in relation to the dates of their disposal. The former ~~method~~ mode of arrangement commends itself to the L. A. of Mysore.

12) The period of preservation of records

As proposed in the draft rules is greatly varies from what it is under the existing rules. (Vide Appendix I of the draft rules & Appendix 6 of the existing rules). In some cases as in Sessions Cases, the period is cut down, while in cases noted in Rule (3) (a) of Appendix 6 of the old rules the period of preservation has risen from 10 yrs. to permanency.

30/1 12) The detailed rules now submitted regarding the arrangement & destruction of Crl records seem to be a great improvement over the existing rules, not so much perhaps as regards substance but as regards clearness Comprehensiveness & preciseness. The present rules were sanctioned only in 1907 & were taken mainly from the rules in force in the Madras Presidency. The late Chief Judge thinks that the existing system is defective in two important respects viz the classification of the records & the rules for their destruction It is only with regard to these matters that any substantial deviations are proposed + these may therefore be considered

The draft of the proposed rules has been flagged V in one place. Flag I*

13) Under the present rules, as well as in the draft rules, the records of a case are to be divided into two parts; but they differ as to the contents of each part. The principle underlying the new rules in force (which are taken from the rules in the Bengal Pres.y + Central Provinces) is that Part I should contain almost all the papers of importance in the logical order of the sequence of events in the course of the trial. This seems to be an improvement over the existing old system; + it has certainly the advantage so far as handling of the records by an appellate Court or other authority is concerned. The other prominent feature of the proposed rule is that almost all papers ~~of importance~~ relating to the case are to be included in Part I

14) Then as regards the period of preservation under the existing exist rules, Part I of Sessions & Warrant Cases is preserved for 20 years; while in Summons cases the period is only 5 years. The Chief Judge considers that it is not necessary that in petty cases where the accused was acquitted or discharged, the record should be preserved for 20 years. Under the proposed rules, a distinction is made between non-bailable cases ending in conviction, bailable cases ending in convictions & cases of acquittal & discharge.

15) The Shimoga Law Assocn has suggested one or two changes in the period of preservation. Viz (1) that the period in (a) to (e) of Appendix I be changed from 14 yrs & 5 years to 16 years & (2) h to l from 2 to 5 years. There seems to be no objection in accepting these modifications

16) All the three Associations generally approve of the draft rules proposed by the Chief Court & think they form a great improvement over the existing rules

They suggest a few unimportant modifns which may be considered

(1) In rule 46, the period allowed to a party to take back his documents it is suggested, may be altered to six months from date of service of notice instead of date of notice. This may be accepted. The suggestion in this connection of the Mysore Assoc^n that the notice may be published in the Gazette is not perhaps as safe to the party as a direct notice to himself

Unnecessary

(2) The Mysore Assoc^n point out that no mention is made in the draft as to how the records are to be arranged in the record room. The present practice I believe is to arrange them according to the consecutive numbers in each year & this may will continue.

No change

(3) In the penultimate para of the Mysore Assoc^n note, a suggestion is made that the records in Summary cases &c approximate to those in Small Cause Cases. This has reference to the Law of Civil Procedure itself, rather than to the rules relating to the arrangement & custody of records

CONFIDENTIAL.

NOTE.

THE accompanying rules are mainly adapted and brought up to date from rules which have been in force for many years in the Bengal Presidency and in the Central Provinces. They are designed to supersede the rules issued under Rule of Practice No. 77, dated the 7th December 1907.

2. Those rules do not profess to deal in detail with the arrangement of records and as a matter of fact no systematic arrangement of a Mysore Criminal record is ever attempted. The first paper is the judgment, then comes the charge and afterwards the evidence interspersed with miscellaneous papers of every kind and description.

3. The classification is as defective as the arrangement. All oral evidence is relegated to Part II as also a number of important papers which appertain more appropriately to Part I.

4. The present practice under which summary trials are recorded in a register is objectionable for the reason that when a record is called for by the Chief Court what is actually forwarded is not the record itself but a copy which has to be made from the record. The Register of Summary Trials was abolished in British India very shortly after its introduction.

5. Regarding the duties of the Record-keeper the present rules are altogether silent and the general state of the Record-rooms leaves very much to be desired. The Record-keepers appear to think that their duties are at an end when the records are received and placed on the racks. Except the 'From' and 'To' registers no registers of any kind are maintained, and if half the records were stolen, the Record-keeper would be none the wiser. Stamps are never repunched so that the frauds which were at one time not at all uncommon in British India are still possible in Mysore.

6. The rules for the destruction of records are very defective. Practically the only distinction drawn is between warrant cases and summons cases. Petty cases of theft in which the accused has been acquitted or discharged are preserved for 20 years. On the other hand the oral evidence even in the most serious cases is destroyed after three years.

7. If the present rules are sanctioned and acted up to, I venture to predict that much good will result.

RULES FOR THE ARRANGEMENT, CUSTODY, PRESERVATION AND DESTRUCTION OF RECORDS OF CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS OF COURTS SUBORDINATE TO THE MYSORE CHIEF COURT.

SECTION I.

Arrangement of Records.

1. The following rules have been framed not only for the purpose of securing a proper arrangement of the papers in files for deposit in the record-room and for their separation for the purposes of destruction, but also to lay down a systematic method of arrangement of the papers in the files for the convenience of Courts of appeal and revision.

To

The Registrar, Chief Court of Mysore,

Bangalore.

Sir,

In compliance with your docket No.195/104 dated 17-7-1912 requesting the opinion of the Mysore Bar Association in re, the draft rules for @ the arrangement, custody, and preservation of records of Criminal Courts in the Mysore Province, the undersigned has the honour to forward herewith the opinion of the Association on the same.

The Association is of opinion that the rules framed in the printed @@@ draft under notice are elaborate, comprehensive, and precise; and are sure to be attended with good results in the near future.

The provision as to the preparation of a list of documents admitted by the Court in each and every case under Rule 19 as also a list of articles produced in, and admitted by the Court under Rule 23 and that the lists so prepared should bear the signature of the Judge or Magistrate, appears to be a new and also wholesome rule inasmuch as one can detect at a quick glance what all documents are available and admitted as evidence in a bulky record and where the documents can be looked for, thus avoiding a needless and tiresome search for them.

The Association finds that the responsibility of arranging the records is assigned to a 'Court Reader', which is a designation, but which it thinks to be only another name for what is understood to be a Court Clerk, or Judicial Gumasta, or Clerk which is also the order maintained in the Code itself, is highly condusive to the preservation of the most important papers in the case as also of great help to the Judges in appeal or revision.

N.B. The printed copy of the draft rules is herewith returned.

Sd/- K.Chandrsekhariah,
Secretary.
